

Emergency Message for U.S. Citizens: Quito (Ecuador), Widespread Forest Fires

The U.S. Embassy in Quito advises U.S. citizens visiting or living in Ecuador that there have been an unusual number of forest and vegetation fires throughout the country this season.

Some of these fires have come very close to urban areas, including Quito, and one required the evacuation of several houses. There have been no deaths reported, but smoke inhalation has been a problem.

Ecuador's firefighters are responding to these fires and the government has declared an orange (2nd highest level) alert in the following provinces: Carchi, Imbabura, Pichincha, Cotopaxi, Chimborazo, Cañar, Azuay, El Oro and Loja. This alert level requires that emergency operation centers are manned 24 hours a day and makes national resources, such as firefighters from other areas, available to respond to local hotspots. U.S. citizens should monitor local media and follow the instructions of local authorities if asked to evacuate.

Please be extra vigilant when using any fire source—matches, cigarettes, BBQ, etc. If you live near dry vegetation keep the plants and area near your house moist. Clear away any dead brush or garbage that can help create a fire ladder to your property. Make a plan for what to do—have your “go bag” ready, know your potential escape routes—should fire threaten your house. Fire moves very fast and is very destructive- it should be taken very seriously. For more information on how to prepare for forest fires, please visit the U.S. Fire Administration's website.
