

Nigeria 2015 Crime and Safety Report: Lagos

Travel Health and Safety; Transportation Security; Stolen items; Kidnapping; Assault; Burglary; Carjacking; Rape/Sexual Violence; Extortion; Fraud; Piracy; Maritime; Oil & Energy; Cyber; Bribery; Elections; Religious Terrorism; Riots/Civil Unrest; Religious Violence; Employee Health Safety; Floods; Disease Outbreak

Africa > Nigeria; Africa > Nigeria > Lagos

5/6/2015

Overall Crime and Safety Situation

Crime Rating: Critical

Crime Threats

Crime is a risk throughout the country. U.S. visitors and residents experienced armed muggings, assaults, burglaries, carjackings, rapes, kidnappings, and extortion.

Home invasions remain a serious threat, with armed robbers threatening even guarded compounds by scaling perimeter walls, following residents/visitors, or subduing guards to gain entry. Armed robbers in Lagos have invaded waterfront compounds by boat.

The contents of this (U) presentation in no way represent the policies, views, or attitudes of the United States Department of State, or the United States Government, except as otherwise noted (e.g., travel advisories, public statements). The presentation was compiled from various open sources and (U) embassy reporting. Please note that all OSAC products are for internal U.S. private sector security purposes only. Publishing or otherwise distributing OSAC-derived information in a manner inconsistent with this policy may result in the discontinuation of OSAC support.

U.S. citizens, Nigerians, and other expatriates have been victims of armed robbery at banks and grocery stores and on airport roads during both daylight and evening hours.

Armed robbers have targeted occupants in vehicles, and smash-and-grab robberies are common with thieves canvassing stopped vehicles for valuables. The thieves will break the vehicle window or simply reach in and remove items while the vehicle is stopped in traffic.

The mainland of Lagos has experienced periodic, violent clashes among street gangs known as "Area Boys."

Cyber

Lagos and southern Nigeria appear to be an epicenter of identity-related and financial crimes targeting Nigerians, expatriates, and U.S. citizens/companies in the U.S. Victims are frequently targeted by email in advance fee scams commonly referred to as "419 Scams." The victims are asked to provide funds to assist someone in a business or financial transaction for a reward or compensation that the victim never sees. Even if the perpetrator is caught, the money is not typically recovered. Other variations of these scams involve a victim who believes s/he is in a relationship with someone they have never met in person. As the scam progresses, the victim is asked to provide funds to support this individual. These scams often center on some type of tragedy (kidnapping, major medical incident) claimed by the perpetrator.

The contents of this (U) presentation in no way represent the policies, views, or attitudes of the United States Department of State, or the United States Government, except as otherwise noted (e.g., travel advisories, public statements). The presentation was compiled from various open sources and (U) embassy reporting. Please note that all OSAC products are for internal U.S. private sector security purposes only. Publishing or otherwise distributing OSAC-derived information in a manner inconsistent with this policy may result in the discontinuation of OSAC support.

Areas of Concern

Never photograph public buildings, monuments, or airports. Some Nigerians may object to having their pictures taken; always ask permission first.

The Niger Delta region experiences frequent attacks and other crimes by armed local groups who continue to fight for control of the region's resources, particularly oil. Oil pipeline vandalism is common and a major source of lost revenue; pipeline vandals have also attacked and killed government security forces. Oil theft, known locally as "bunkering," is widespread and adds to the disruption of business. Piracy and kidnapping continue to be of major concern, and Westerners, including Americans, have been victims.

Transportation-Safety Situation

Road Safety and Road Conditions

Driving is a major safety concern throughout Nigeria. Although traffic laws exist, enforcement remains almost non-existent. Authorities do not require safety inspections of vehicles. The lack of traffic laws, poorly maintained roads, and unpredictable driving habits add to the risk of travel. Driving during daylight hours is preferable, and driving at night, particularly in remote areas, should be avoided.

The contents of this (U) presentation in no way represent the policies, views, or attitudes of the United States Department of State, or the United States Government, except as otherwise noted (e.g., travel advisories, public statements). The presentation was compiled from various open sources and (U) embassy reporting. Please note that all OSAC products are for internal U.S. private sector security purposes only. Publishing or otherwise distributing OSAC-derived information in a manner inconsistent with this policy may result in the discontinuation of OSAC support.

Accidents are frequent and often involve fatalities. Many traffic accidents go unreported, and no reliable statistics exist on traffic fatalities due to the lack of centralized reporting. Vehicular accidents frequently draw large crowds that may become confrontational. The lack of medical responses or adequate trauma facilities is also a concern.

Never leave identifying materials or valuables in a vehicle. Traveling outside of major cities after dark is not recommended because of both crime and road safety concerns. Keep vehicles well-maintained, including a usable spare tire and a full tank of fuel. Remain a safe distance behind the vehicle ahead to allow space for avoidance maneuvers, if necessary. Be alert for suspicious persons when exiting or approaching your vehicle.

Public Transportation Conditions

All public transportation is considered unsafe and its use discouraged. Motorcycle taxis, commonly known as "okadas," are of particular concern. Okadas present a significant nuisance and danger to other motorists with unpredictable driving and lack of compliance with all traffic rules. Okada drivers and even their passengers often become confrontational and violent when involved in accidents. Okada drivers are also known to engage in crime, either as active participants or as means of escape.

Aviation/Airport Conditions

Armed robberies and attacks focus on both businesses in the immediate vicinity of Murtala Muhammad International Airport (MMIA) and arriving passengers. In July 2013, a British citizen was kidnapped while being driven from the airport. The victim was released. Security at MMIA has improved, and airport officials comply with Transportation Security Administration security standards. TSA conducts regular security assessments at MMIA. Travelers can expect to be approached by transients asking for money, sometimes aggressively. Reports of extortion and bribery solicitation attempts by airport officials have also receded but remain a concern.

The contents of this (U) presentation in no way represent the policies, views, or attitudes of the United States Department of State, or the United States Government, except as otherwise noted (e.g., travel advisories, public statements). The presentation was compiled from various open sources and (U) embassy reporting. Please note that all OSAC products are for internal U.S. private sector security purposes only. Publishing or otherwise distributing OSAC-derived information in a manner inconsistent with this policy may result in the discontinuation of OSAC support.

Other Travel Conditions

U.S. citizens, Nigerians, and expatriates have experienced harassment and shakedowns at vehicle checkpoints and during other encounters with officials, particularly the military. Always slow down and acknowledge police/military at checkpoints. Police are authorized to shoot and will if you do not stop.

Political, Economic, Religious, and Ethnic Violence

The presidential election is scheduled for March 28, 2015, and the state gubernatorial elections are scheduled for April 11, 2015. Politically-related violence during the national election held in 2011 led to the death of 800 people, mostly in northern Nigeria. Political party offices of both major parties were attacked in January 2015, including two offices of the All Progressives Party office in Rivers state. A People's Democratic Party office was set ablaze in Zamfara state the same week. Several large political rallies were held in January 2015, and although generally peaceful, reports emerged of crime and violence during the rallies.

The contents of this (U) presentation in no way represent the policies, views, or attitudes of the United States Department of State, or the United States Government, except as otherwise noted (e.g., travel advisories, public statements). The presentation was compiled from various open sources and (U) embassy reporting. Please note that all OSAC products are for internal U.S. private sector security purposes only. Publishing or otherwise distributing OSAC-derived information in a manner inconsistent with this policy may result in the discontinuation of OSAC support.

Political Violence Rating: High

Local, Regional, and International Terrorism Threats/Concerns

There remains a significant terrorist threat, especially in northern Nigeria. Efforts to combat terrorism and organized crime continued to prove challenging due to systemic corruption, limited operational capacity, and an ineffective military. The extremist group Boko Haram is suspected of, or has claimed responsibility for, most of the terrorist activity in Nigeria. Boko Haram carried out kidnappings, killings, bombings, and attacks on civilian and military targets, resulting in over 4,000 deaths, injuries, and significant destruction of property in 2014. While Boko Haram has not claimed responsibility for attacks in the south of the country, it is widely believed the group was responsible for the December 2014 prison break in Ekiti state and a bomb attack at an oil depot in Apapa, Lagos state.

The Federal Capital Territory (FCT) experienced bombings in April, May, and June 2014. Several hundred people were killed in two attacks, two weeks apart, at a busy bus terminal on the outskirts of Abuja in April and May; another explosion occurred at a shopping complex in central Abuja in June 2014. Although there is no indication Boko Haram or any other terrorist organization is specifically targeting Americans or other Westerners, the terror threat continues to challenge business activity and travel.

Terrorism Rating: High

The contents of this (U) presentation in no way represent the policies, views, or attitudes of the United States Department of State, or the United States Government, except as otherwise noted (e.g., travel advisories, public statements). The presentation was compiled from various open sources and (U) embassy reporting. Please note that all OSAC products are for internal U.S. private sector security purposes only. Publishing or otherwise distributing OSAC-derived information in a manner inconsistent with this policy may result in the discontinuation of OSAC support.

Anti-American/Anti-Western Sentiment

There were no major protests against the U.S. in 2014. In September 2012, large protests occurred outside the U.S. Embassy in Abuja, coinciding with similar anti-U.S. protests worldwide. There have been several generally peaceful protests, voicing opinion against U.S. foreign policy. Most Nigerians have a favorable opinion of the U.S., and Americans are typically not targeted solely because they are American.

Civil Unrest

Endemic poverty, lack of basic infrastructure (reliable electricity), income inequality, unemployment, and a poor education system generally lead to mass dissatisfaction among the local population. Oil unions, judiciary staff, teachers, and health care workers were among those who carried out protests against the government in 2014. The majority of the protests was peaceful and carried out in compliance with local law. In November 2014, police arrested seven people after deploying tear gas at the National Assembly building following reports of intruders trying to gain access.

Travelers are advised to avoid these mass gatherings if possible.

Religious/Ethnic Violence

The contents of this (U) presentation in no way represent the policies, views, or attitudes of the United States Department of State, or the United States Government, except as otherwise noted (e.g., travel advisories, public statements). The presentation was compiled from various open sources and (U) embassy reporting. Please note that all OSAC products are for internal U.S. private sector security purposes only. Publishing or otherwise distributing OSAC-derived information in a manner inconsistent with this policy may result in the discontinuation of OSAC support.

Ethnic and communal violence is endemic, particularly in the “Middle Belt” states of Plateau, Bauchi, Benue, Kaduna, and Nassawara. With over 40 ethno-linguistic groups in Plateau state alone, clashes are commonplace, but violence is largely localized. The U.S. Council on Foreign Relations estimates that 785 sectarian-related deaths occurred in Plateau state between 2011 and 2013. The U.S. Commission on International Religious Freedom estimates that approximately 14,000 Nigerians have died from sectarian violence since 1999, indicating that more Nigerians were killed by sectarian violence than by terrorism.

Perpetrators are rarely prosecuted, and there is a common belief that some of the violence is politically-motivated. Most clashes center on land disputes between nomadic cattle herders and resident farmers. Reprisal attacks are common and lead to a perpetual cycle of violence in the Middle Belt region. Although always a concern for travelers, foreigners are not typically targeted by this inter-communal violence.

Post-specific Concerns

Environmental Hazards

Lagos ranks among the cities with the highest air and noise pollution levels globally, largely due to rapid urbanization, limited infrastructure, and a rapidly growing population. These conditions lead to an increased number of vehicles on the road, poor graded gasoline, and the extensive use of loud generators.

The contents of this (U) presentation in no way represent the policies, views, or attitudes of the United States Department of State, or the United States Government, except as otherwise noted (e.g., travel advisories, public statements). The presentation was compiled from various open sources and (U) embassy reporting. Please note that all OSAC products are for internal U.S. private sector security purposes only. Publishing or otherwise distributing OSAC-derived information in a manner inconsistent with this policy may result in the discontinuation of OSAC support.

Nigeria has two rainy seasons: March-August, September-mid-October. In 2012, Nigeria experienced the worst flooding in many years, which resulted in over one million people displaced and several hundred dead. Many states in the south were dramatically affected, especially those in the flood prone Niger Delta. Additionally, many dams were in danger of failure. Some additional flooding was caused by the intentional release of water in many reservoirs to help ensure their integrity. Road travel is virtually impossible under these weather conditions.

Kidnapping Threat

Kidnapping for ransom (KFR) continues to be a security concern nationwide and is a lucrative industry. Criminal organizations target affluent, high-profile Nigerians and expatriates, particularly in Lagos, Edo, Bayelsa, Delta, and Rivers states. However, kidnapping incidents in the north are typically ideologically-motivated. Kidnapping incidents are under-reported, and the rate of unconfirmed kidnappings continues to grow.

A German citizen kidnapped in Adamawa state in July 2014 was rescued by Cameroonian forces in January 2015 after a military rescue operation on the Cameroonian border. On April 14, Boko Haram attacked a girls' secondary school in Chibok, Borno state, and, according to the Nigerian police, abducted 276 girls. Of them, 57 students escaped while being transported to a remote camp. Boko Haram leader Abubakar Shekau stated in a video that the girls were considered "spoils of war" and would become brides of Boko Haram members.

The contents of this (U) presentation in no way represent the policies, views, or attitudes of the United States Department of State, or the United States Government, except as otherwise noted (e.g., travel advisories, public statements). The presentation was compiled from various open sources and (U) embassy reporting. Please note that all OSAC products are for internal U.S. private sector security purposes only. Publishing or otherwise distributing OSAC-derived information in a manner inconsistent with this policy may result in the discontinuation of OSAC support.

In October 2014, armed criminals attempted to kidnap and rob two expatriates traveling by road in Ogun state. During the course of the robbery, the criminals opened fire on a vehicle and killed the occupant. The other victim, traveling in a separate vehicle, was kidnapped and later released.

Kidnappings have also occurred in the more affluent areas of Lagos. In March 2013, a British expatriate was kidnapped at night while waiting for security guards to open the gate to his residence on Victoria Island after a U.S.-sponsored event. In September 2014, two American expatriates were kidnapped in the Niger Delta. Law enforcement was able to recover these individuals unharmed; however, the perpetrators remain at large.

Targeting of average Nigerians for smaller monetary gains has increased in recent years. Criminals know that police are rarely contacted during a kidnapping and that families are quick to pay ransoms for the release of relatives. Kidnappers can be particularly brutal and can be expected to physically assault the victim and those delivering ransom money. The methodology involves extensive planning by the kidnappers who often have some connection to the victim and are aware of the victim's movements and habits.

Police Response

Despite a visible police presence in large cities, police assistance does not have a wide reach. Police response to incidents involving the diplomatic and consular community, although well-intentioned, often relies upon transport provided by an embassy or consulate staff to crime scenes. Law enforcement authorities usually respond slowly or not at all and provide little/no investigative support to victims. A serious lack of resources (communications equipment, vehicles, skilled leadership, training) continues to undermine the effectiveness of the NPF. Usually, victims must maintain close contact to move an investigation forward. Crime laboratories and facilities to process evidence do not exist. As such, most Nigerians do not perceive the NPF as an effective law enforcement body and have little faith in the criminal justice system. A call to police for assistance may result in solicitation of bribes. As a result, criminal groups do not fear arrest or prosecution for their crimes.

The contents of this (U) presentation in no way represent the policies, views, or attitudes of the United States Department of State, or the United States Government, except as otherwise noted (e.g., travel advisories, public statements). The presentation was compiled from various open sources and (U) embassy reporting. Please note that all OSAC products are for internal U.S. private sector security purposes only. Publishing or otherwise distributing OSAC-derived information in a manner inconsistent with this policy may result in the discontinuation of OSAC support.

Local police or neighborhood associations generally do not deter or disrupt burglaries and other crimes and seldom apprehend or detain suspects after the fact. NPF personnel do not patrol residential neighborhoods, and numerous NPF officers assigned to private security details for either businesses or individuals routinely ignore any requests for assistance not directly associated with their assignments. For example, when an armored SUV belonging to an international corporation was attacked by armed assailants on a major roadway very close to the U.S. Consulate General in Lagos in March 2013, police Rapid Response Squad (RRS) units less than 100 meters away did not intervene.

Vigilante justice is common in rural areas as well as cities. Perpetrators of crime are often beaten or burned to death by mobs before police arrive.

How to Handle Incidents of Police Detention or Harassment

U.S. citizens should immediately identify themselves to police and security personnel as U.S. citizens. Under international conventions, the government must notify the U.S. Embassy in Abuja or the U.S. Consulate General in Lagos of the detention of American citizens within 72 hours.

The contents of this (U) presentation in no way represent the policies, views, or attitudes of the United States Department of State, or the United States Government, except as otherwise noted (e.g., travel advisories, public statements). The presentation was compiled from various open sources and (U) embassy reporting. Please note that all OSAC products are for internal U.S. private sector security purposes only. Publishing or otherwise distributing OSAC-derived information in a manner inconsistent with this policy may result in the discontinuation of OSAC support.

If arrested, detainees should cooperate respectfully and maintain their composure when interacting with local officials. Normally, authorities do not feed detainees; therefore, individuals in custody must make arrangements for meals; if no one is available to assist, detainees should contact the American Citizen Services Unit (ACS) at the U.S. Embassy or U.S. Consulate General to facilitate a loan for meals.

Crime Victim Assistance

There is no reliable national emergency communication number. The American Citizen Services unit (ACS) at the U.S. Embassy or U.S. Consulate General should be the first point of contact for assistance. While in Lagos state, travelers may attempt to obtain police assistance by calling 767 or 112. Individuals should inquire at the nearest police station about the contact telephone numbers for that particular station. For additional information, please review the U.S. Department of State Travel Information website, "Help for American Victims of Crime Overseas": http://travel.state.gov/travel/tips/emergencies/emergencies_1212.html.)

Police/Security Agencies

Expatriates and affluent Nigerians employ their own security and utilize armored vehicles for travel. Police officers and other law enforcement agents are frequently hired by businesses and individuals to provide security. Most businesses employ guard services, and many companies offer varying quality of service. As Nigerian law prohibits the arming of private security personnel, police often supplement guard forces. These arrangements can be made by your local guard company or with the local police station.

The contents of this (U) presentation in no way represent the policies, views, or attitudes of the United States Department of State, or the United States Government, except as otherwise noted (e.g., travel advisories, public statements). The presentation was compiled from various open sources and (U) embassy reporting. Please note that all OSAC products are for internal U.S. private sector security purposes only. Publishing or otherwise distributing OSAC-derived information in a manner inconsistent with this policy may result in the discontinuation of OSAC support.

Medical Emergencies

The best health care is available in private and nonprofit medical facilities. However, even these facilities typically fail to meet U.S. standards. National disaster management is not effective or functional. The civilian sector's disaster management capabilities are poor to nonexistent. The military provides crowd control during disasters but no systemic medical response. The military has no resources available for mass casualty response. For more information, please review the Department of State Travel Information website, "Medical Information for Americans Abroad" at http://travel.state.gov/travel/tips/brochures/brochures_1215.html.

Contact Information for Recommended Hospitals/Clinics

International SOS Clinic

23 A Temple

Ikoyi Island – Lagos

Dr. Pierre Bentesque

The contents of this (U) presentation in no way represent the policies, views, or attitudes of the United States Department of State, or the United States Government, except as otherwise noted (e.g., travel advisories, public statements). The presentation was compiled from various open sources and (U) embassy reporting. Please note that all OSAC products are for internal U.S. private sector security purposes only. Publishing or otherwise distributing OSAC-derived information in a manner inconsistent with this policy may result in the discontinuation of OSAC support.

08035352559

Pierre.bentesque@internationalsos.com

Tel: +234 1 4625 600, 01-4617710, 01-4613608/9, +234-1-775-6080

Allyn Rogers (Business and Administrative Manager), allyn.rogers@internationalsos.com

Lagoon Hospital

Modupe Dada, Clinical Manager, dupe.dada@lagoonhospitals.com

8 Marine Road, Apapa

Tel: 08023113522; 07029175512; 08087183137

Dr. Onakoya, Medical Director

Cell: 08034020277

Office: 01 870 7011, 01 628 3812-4

customerservices @lagoonhospitals.com

www.lagoonhospitals.com

Reddington Multi Specialist Hospital

Dr. Neil Davidson, Dr. Lawani, and Dr. Owabowale

The contents of this (U) presentation in no way represent the policies, views, or attitudes of the United States Department of State, or the United States Government, except as otherwise noted (e.g., travel advisories, public statements). The presentation was compiled from various open sources and (U) embassy reporting. Please note that all OSAC products are for internal U.S. private sector security purposes only. Publishing or otherwise distributing OSAC-derived information in a manner inconsistent with this policy may result in the discontinuation of OSAC support.

12 Idowu Martins Street

Victoria Island, Lagos

Near Mega Plaza

Tel: 234 0 806 004 5651 or 271 5340-3

info@reddingtonhospital.com

www.reddingtonhospital.com

Atlantic Medical Centre

8A Maroko Close

Off Oyinkan Abayomi Drive

Ikoyi, Lagos.

Dr. El-Harake

Cell: 0803 400 2400

01 7753838 atlantic@nova.to

The contents of this (U) presentation in no way represent the policies, views, or attitudes of the United States Department of State, or the United States Government, except as otherwise noted (e.g., travel advisories, public statements). The presentation was compiled from various open sources and (U) embassy reporting. Please note that all OSAC products are for internal U.S. private sector security purposes only. Publishing or otherwise distributing OSAC-derived information in a manner inconsistent with this policy may result in the discontinuation of OSAC support.

First Cardiology Consultants

20A Thompson Avenue

Next to the British Council

Off Glover Road

Off Old Kingsway Road

Ikoyi, Lagos

Dr. Adeyemi Johnson

Tel: +234 (0)803 5250205; (0)17406284; (0)17406285; (0)8082114266

frontdesk@firstcardiologyconsultantsonline.com

The Children's Practice

25 Raymond Njoku Street,

Off Awolowo Road, Ikoyi, Lagos

Dr. A.L. Anga

Tel: +234 (0)1-460-1941; (0)1-893-0723; (0)8022235834

info@childrenspractice.com

The contents of this (U) presentation in no way represent the policies, views, or attitudes of the United States Department of State, or the United States Government, except as otherwise noted (e.g., travel advisories, public statements). The presentation was compiled from various open sources and (U) embassy reporting. Please note that all OSAC products are for internal U.S. private sector security purposes only. Publishing or otherwise distributing OSAC-derived information in a manner inconsistent with this policy may result in the discontinuation of OSAC support.

Recommended Air Ambulance Services

For the information pertaining to air ambulance services, please visit:
http://travel.state.gov/travel/cis_pa_tw/cis/cis_1470.html#companies

CDC Country-specific Vaccination and Health Guidance

Malaria is widespread among the local population, and most visitors take some form of malaria prophylaxis.

For CDC country-specific vaccination and health guidance, please visit:
<http://wwwnc.cdc.gov/travel/destinations/nigeria.htm>.

Tips on How to Avoid Becoming a Victim

Situational Awareness Best Practices

Due to the widespread poverty and perception of Western affluence, Americans should take extra precautions when traveling.

The contents of this (U) presentation in no way represent the policies, views, or attitudes of the United States Department of State, or the United States Government, except as otherwise noted (e.g., travel advisories, public statements). The presentation was compiled from various open sources and (U) embassy reporting. Please note that all OSAC products are for internal U.S. private sector security purposes only. Publishing or otherwise distributing OSAC-derived information in a manner inconsistent with this policy may result in the discontinuation of OSAC support.

Avoid disputes with local citizens. Always be polite and respectful of police officers and soldiers. Avoid large crowds. Be wary of business offers promising large payoffs for little/no investment. Avoid guides and other strangers who may approach you with offers of assistance.

Do not use personal checks, credit cards, or Automatic Teller Machines (ATMs). Due to the proliferation of identity and financial fraud, do not carry detailed information about yourself and your finances that you do not need. Carry only the amount of cash that you need and distribute funds among several pockets. Avoid displaying any items of value. If approached by an armed robber/carjacker, cooperate.

All U.S. citizens should remain aware of current situations including curfews, travel restrictions, and states of emergency in the areas they are in or plan to visit. This information is commonly announced by the news media but can change with very little notice.

U.S. Consulate Location and Contact Information

Consulate Address and Hours of Operation

The contents of this (U) presentation in no way represent the policies, views, or attitudes of the United States Department of State, or the United States Government, except as otherwise noted (e.g., travel advisories, public statements). The presentation was compiled from various open sources and (U) embassy reporting. Please note that all OSAC products are for internal U.S. private sector security purposes only. Publishing or otherwise distributing OSAC-derived information in a manner inconsistent with this policy may result in the discontinuation of OSAC support.

U.S. Consulate General Lagos Contact Information

2 Walter Carrington Crescent

Victoria Island, Lagos, Lagos State, Nigeria

Consulate Contact Numbers

Regional Security Office: (234) 1-460-3514 Consulate Operator: (234) 1-460-3400

Marine Security Guard at Post One: (234) 1-460-3410

Duty Officer: (234) 807-550-0167

Website: http://nigeria.usembassy.gov/general_consul.html

Nearby Posts

Embassy Abuja: <http://nigeria.usembassy.gov/>

Consulate Guidance

The contents of this (U) presentation in no way represent the policies, views, or attitudes of the United States Department of State, or the United States Government, except as otherwise noted (e.g., travel advisories, public statements). The presentation was compiled from various open sources and (U) embassy reporting. Please note that all OSAC products are for internal U.S. private sector security purposes only. Publishing or otherwise distributing OSAC-derived information in a manner inconsistent with this policy may result in the discontinuation of OSAC support.

The Consular Information Sheet for Nigeria provides additional information for any traveler to the country: http://travel.state.gov/travel/cis_pa_tw/cis/cis_987.html. It is also recommended that any traveler register with the U.S. Department of State: <https://travelregistration.state.gov/ibrs/ui/>.

OSAC Country Council Information

Nigeria's Overseas Security Advisory Council (OSAC) Country Council is located in Abuja and in Lagos. General membership meetings of the Lagos Country Council occur every Tuesday at the Consulate General's Guest Quarters (GQ) facility (6 Queens Drive, Ikoyi, Lagos, Lagos State). Abuja Country Council meetings occur the last Thursday of every month at the Sheraton Hotel (Ladi Kwali Way, Abuja, FCT). Access is restricted to active OSAC members only, so please contact the RSO at the Embassy in Abuja or the Consulate General in Lagos before attending the meeting. The RSO can be contacted at:

Lagos: 234-1-460-3514 or at RSOLagos@state.gov.

Abuja: 234-9-461-4175 or at RSOAbuja@state.gov

To reach OSAC's African team, please email OSACAF@state.gov.

The contents of this (U) presentation in no way represent the policies, views, or attitudes of the United States Department of State, or the United States Government, except as otherwise noted (e.g., travel advisories, public statements). The presentation was compiled from various open sources and (U) embassy reporting. Please note that all OSAC products are for internal U.S. private sector security purposes only. Publishing or otherwise distributing OSAC-derived information in a manner inconsistent with this policy may result in the discontinuation of OSAC support.